COL. MOORE SMITH'S SOFT-HEARTED.

Colonel G. Moore Smith Calls Live Pigeon Shooting Very Cruel.

WOULDN'T KILL A DOE.

Had Many Chances in His Youth but Their Brown Eyes Stayed His Hand.

"I will see Major Strong to-morrow," said Colonel G. Moore Smith, the new Police Commissioner, yesterday, at his home, The Greens, in Sayville, L. I.

If the Mayor says, "Go right to work," I will jump into the harness and go ahead, but I'm not sworn in yet. I'm going sailing with my family and no worries concerning the police will accompany me on the trip.

Colonel Smith is an enthusiastic sportsman. His eyes gleamed as he listened to the water lapping the sides of the Jessie, the stanch thirty-foot sloop which he has rented for the summer from a grizzled boatman known as Captain Green, who generally helps the Colonel handle the boat.

A private cruise of the Colonel and his family, for his wife and handsome daughter, Florence, not yet out of her teens, is also very fond of being away to the south and touching at Point of Woods, where she can study the Summer colony of Chautauque, which enjoys lectures on every conceivable subject.

M'KINLEY SHOCKS A GOLD SEAGON.

President Puts a Silver Dollar Into the Collection Plate.

DID SO TO BE RID OF IT.

Ladue, of Klondyke, Divides the Honors of Attention with the Executive.

By Julius Chambers.

Hotel Champlain, August 1.—President McKinley passed a quiet Sunday. He rose about 9 o'clock, took a walk to the lake, returned to breakfast, and at 10:30 went to church in the village. He was accompanied by General and Mrs. Alger and Secretary Porter. Mrs. McKinley did not go. The First Methodist Church was filled. Everybody in Plattsburg turning out to hear the Rev. A. H. Eaton and a male quartet, consisting of Messrs. Schaeffer, Harris, Caranagh and Hale. The soprano soloist was Miss Terwilliger, a Summer visitor.

Parson Eaton took for his text the fourth chapter of Acts, 12th verse. I did not take the words down, but the thought is that no more man can inherit eternal life save through divine mercy. The President sat in the pew of Mr. Gubford, mayor of the village, about the middle of the church. He was attentive and sang with the congregation. When the plate was passed, the President put a silver dollar into the collection. It was a great shock to the elder
